

Robert Mancuso

Bio

Robert F. Mancuso was a senior executive with Merrill Lynch, where he was the first President and Chief Executive Officer of Merrill Lynch Capital Partners, Inc., the entity responsible for establishing and growing Merrill's private equity business, which he helped found. Under his leadership Merrill was the first Wall Street firm to raise a captive private equity fund from institutional investors. He also helped design Merrill's very successful strategy of being the White Knight to companies under threatened takeover from raiders who were financed by Drexel Burnham and Mike Milken. He was also the Chief Executive Officer of Mancuso & Company and The Dellacorte Group, both of which he subsequently founded. Prior to joining Merrill Lynch, Mr. Mancuso was associated with Lazard Freres & Co. He also practiced law with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission.

Mr. Mancuso currently is the CEO of Capri Capital, LLC, his family office, which is a Palm Beach-based private equity-focused investment firm. Mr. Mancuso is a thought leader in the family office direct investing space. He has written four articles that address the investing needs of Single Family Offices, and particularly the challenges of direct investing. He is a frequent speaker at family office conferences held both domestically and abroad.

Mr. Mancuso was previously a member of the Advisory Board of Columbia University's Medical Center.
